Abstract: Managed care has affected clinical research at academic medical centers (AMCs) in various ways. It has reduced revenues for both faculty practice plans and major teaching hospitals, thus constraining the internal funds available for the cross-subsidy of research. it has increased the amount of patient care required of academic clinicians to meet target incomes, thus reducing the time for research. Has managed care also reduced the availability of patients for academic clinical research, either indirectly by diverting patients to community hospitals or directly by constraining access to such research, including clinical trials? Consistent with other studies and based extensive interviews at nine AMCs, this research found little evidence that patients were a scarce resource for academic clinical research.

DECLARATION OF ROBERT A. DICKINSON

- I, Robert A. Dickinson, declare under penalty of perjury:
- 1. I have been retained by PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP ("PwC") as an expert witness in the above-captioned action. I submit this declaration in support of PwC's Memorandum in Opposition to the Committee's Motion to Exclude Certain Testimony From PwC's Experts.
- 2. I submitted an expert report in this case, signed on November 9, 2004. On March 10, 2005, I was deposed in this case by counsel for the Committee.
- 3. I am the Managing Director of BDC Advisors, LLC ("BDC"), a healthcare consulting firm. I have been involved in providing a wide range of services for health plans, physician organizations, hospitals, hospital systems and academic medical centers across the country. A summary of my qualifications and experience, partial list of clients and bibliography were attached to my report as Exhibits 1, 2 and 3.

- In my work for BDC, I have often directed turnaround projects for 4. hospitals and hospital systems. For example, I was the project manager for BDC's work with Catholic Healthcare West, which was a system involving 47 hospitals in three states when we successfully conducted a turnaround.
- I also regularly provide advice and professional services to clients 5. concerning the sale or potential sale of hospitals or hospital assets.
- I have directed or performed valuations of hospitals or hospital-6. related assets in 14 client engagements. Many of these have been in the context of evaluating whether and when to sell hospitals.
- I have frequently provided advice to BDC clients on whether and 7. when to sell particular hospital assets. Many of my turnaround projects require me to address such issues, as the sale of some or all of a client's assets is an option to be considered as part of turning around a system's performance.
- In addition, I have been asked by clients on a number of occasions 8. to evaluate, identify and contact potential buyers for hospitals, and to perform extensive due diligence of buyers.
- 9. In one engagement, for example, I was asked in 2004 to evaluate and oversee the solicitation of potential bidders and partners for the Floating Hospital For Children, a hospital that is part of the Tufts-New England Medical Center. In connection with that engagement, I identified and evaluated two potential buyers or partners for that hospital. I developed and oversaw the distribution of formal requests for proposals to them, and conducted due diligence of them.

- 10. I performed another engagement of this type on behalf of Stanford University Hospital and Clinics in 2000 and 2001. In this engagement, I identified and evaluated four potential buyers for the client, and evaluated alternative options (including the sale, lease or transfer of clinic assets to the School of Medicine) for bringing financial stability to the client's operations.
- 11. In the Tufts-New England Medical Center and Stanford University engagements discussed above, and others, I provided my clients with many of the same types of services that are the subject of my evaluation of the AHERF sale process in this case.
- 12. I have also performed research on sales of hospitals in bankruptcy. Prior to AHERF, it is my understanding that only a few hospitals had ever been sold out of bankruptcy. To my knowledge, no academic medical center had ever been sold out of bankruptcy before AHERF.
- 13. While the bankruptcy filing had a negative effect on the DVOG sale, it did nothing to ease or address the many other problems with that sale that I identified in my report. I addressed the effect of the bankruptcy (Report, pp. 32-33), based on a number of sources, including the testimony of witnesses in this case who were involved in the AHERF bankruptcy, scholarly articles concerning the effects of bankruptcy filings on asset sales in other industries, and my own experience in asset sales and understanding of the factors that affect such sales (Report, p. 33).
- 14. At my deposition, I was asked, "Have you ever given what is called a fairness opinion in the business to or for purchasers or regulators regarding the sale of a hospital or set of hospitals?" (Deposition p. 265.) I answered, "Our firm has. I have not." (Deposition p. 265.) Because I was asked if I had "given" a fairness opinion, I understood the question to be addressed to whether or not I had signed such an opinion, and I answered it on the basis of that understanding. I had the same understanding of the subsequent question when I was asked if I had "done a fairness opinion" (Deposition p. 265), and answered on the basis of that understanding that I had not.

- 15. While I have not signed a fairness opinion, I have frequently worked with my colleagues at BDC on fairness opinions.
- 16. It is the policy of BDC Advisors that only the Managing Director of the firm can sign a fairness opinion. I became Managing Director of BDC in late 2003. Prior to that time, Richard Wesslund (the founder of BDC) was the Managing Director, and he signed fairness opinions given by the firm until I succeeded him.
- AHERF and its financial advisors made a serious mistake by entering into "sole source" negotiations with Vanguard Health Systems, Inc. during the process that led to the sale of the assets of DVOG. In forming that opinion, I relied on my experience in seeking buyers for hospital assets. In light of my experience in assisting clients with the sale of hospitals, I believe it is customary to involve multiple buyers, rather than to select only one buyer and conduct sole source negotiations. Sole source negotiations are seldom used, and based on my experience are generally an inadvisable practice for the prospective seller. Accordingly, in both of the examples identified above (in paragraphs 9 and 10) in which I identified and evaluated potential buyers for a client's hospitals, multiple potential buyers were involved. I conclude that AHERF's decision to proceed with only Vanguard as its sole bidder was a mistake in light of my experience advising clients on identifying and working with bidders.

- 18. In my report (on pages 34-35), I also expressed my opinion that AHERF and its financial advisors did a poor job in their preparation for the sale process and the manner in which they dealt with Vanguard and other potential bidders. Here again, I relied on my experience in assisting clients with preparation and organization for the sale of hospitals. I concluded that AHERF did a poor job of preparing for the sale of DVOG, and of dealing with potential bidders for DVOG, by applying the same skills and experience that I use when advising clients in such matters.
- In addition, (as I discussed in my deposition at pages 267-270), I 19. have done research on conversions of non-profit academic medical centers to for-profit status through sales to or joint ventures with for-profit companies. Only a very small number of such transactions took place prior to AHERF. In particular, I reviewed publicly-available information about the academic medical centers at St. Louis University, George Washington University, Tulane University, the University of Southern California, St. Joseph's Hospital (Creighton University Medical Center), Emory University and the University of Chicago, each of which was sold to or formed a joint venture with a for-profit company.
- 20. My research into these conversions of not-for-profit academic medical centers provides further support for the opinions I expressed in my report. For example, the sellers in these transactions generally avoided the "sole source" negotiations that I discuss in pages 29-32 of my report, and in paragraph 17 above.
